of work, but it's going to be like some of those little children who are bad and they don't have a stamp on them to say where who they...where they come from; nobody will claim the child. When people are asking, whose little bad boy is that, well, then everybody starts looking around. So this is going to be one of those things that has neither father nor mother; it just hatched. I see some serious problems with it and my amendments are not designed to correct any of them, but to call attention to the flaws in it and the flimflam nature of it. I am not interested in having other senators on the floor to vote on this bill or even to listen. I am making a record. I am compiling a record and that's what I want and that record will be compiled, and that's why I'm not asking for a call of the house. But I might at some point, because if we fall below a quorum then we have to adjourn. We cannot conduct business if we don't have a quorum. So if they hide out and they stay hidden, then they play into my hands. But I don't want them to do that. I want us to stay here for awhile and continue...

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...enjoying each other's fellowship. Since I have to cover eight hours, the amendments are not that important. The amendments themselves, the one that I've offered, has not generated much discussion, but they give an opportunity to go into detailed questioning. And many of...most of my colleagues have not been here. They don't realize that the questions can't be answered or haven't been answered, and that those who are pushing this don't know the answer. And we've already been told that there can be no amendments. They cut a deal of the kind that are not supposed to be made in a Unicameral, from what I read in the newspaper. Everything is done (laugh) out in the open. The one thing that was done out in the open was to tell the rest of us you can't add an amendment because we're not going to accept any; that was the deal. What I want to find out next time around is who these deal...who are complicitous in the deal. I know one of them, who shall remain nameless at this point.

PRESIDENT MAURSTAD: Time

SENATOR CHAMBERS: Thank you, Mr. President.
